

AISD Special Education Best Practices Survey Results August 2010

Results summarized in this report represent all survey/interview respondents data available as of September 14, 2010. This is a summary derived from work with ARRA IDEA Eliminating the Gap project, and it highlights successful schools' best practices in supporting special education students' passing TAKS reading/ELA and math in 2009-10.

Who participated in the survey and interviews?

In August 2010, AISD schools from all areas of Austin were invited to participate in a special education best practices survey or interview based on their special education students' TAKS 2009-10 performance in reading/ELA and/or math based on one or both of the following criteria:

- High number of test takers and percentages passing TAKS - reading/ELA 70% or higher; math 60% or higher
- Greater than 50% of special education students successfully passing TAKS or TAKS-A reading/ELA or math 2009-10 who had switched from TAKS-M in 2008-09

Our Respondents

Staff who participated in the survey and interviews included principals, special education department chairs, general education teachers, and special education teachers.

Common Findings Among Schools

Most Effective Practices of Your Campus' Interventions

- Consistent, frequent interventions – support during and beyond the school day
- Systematic, explicit, focused instruction
- High expectations among teachers and students
- “Team effort” by all staff to support student success; good coordination, frequent communication
- High interest materials on grade level to encourage student motivation
- Use of appropriate materials, manipulatives, accommodations, technology
- Every secondary student (as appropriate) has access to a graphing calculator
- Regular progress monitoring and communication among all teachers; teachers plan together
- Start interventions early and offer through the school year
- Inclusion in general ed. classroom and on-grade level instruction supported by resource/pull-out
- Address individual needs of student; use data to ensure student gets most appropriate intervention and assessment; use small group instruction when possible
- Raise rigor in resource classrooms by focusing on TAKS terminology used for each objective
- Special ed. teachers attend all professional development offered to general ed. teachers

Progress Monitoring – How Did You Use Data? Some examples.....

- Staff met regularly to review multiple sources of student data (e.g., past TAKS performance, TAKS release test, DIBELS, DRA, benchmarks, fluency, comprehension, data by objective, attendance, discipline, teacher input on student's class performance and motivation)
- Decisions about appropriate intervention and tutoring made using student data – based on student needs
- Reevaluated students regularly
- Administrator and teachers involved
- Met to determine what was and wasn't working in intervention
- Looked at students individually if they were moving from TAKS-M to TAKS/A – looked at several types of data to determine if student was ready
- Progress monitoring used frequently for identification, re-teach, assessment of mastery
- Differentiated instruction based on student data
- Data reviews helped celebrate student mastery of concepts and skills

Strategies to Encourage Attendance at Tutoring

- Snacks, food
- Rewards, prizes, computer time
- Games, centers, engaging activities
- Small group, individual attention
- Expectations and praise communicated to students
- Reminders to students
- Communications to parents (phone call, note home, reminders)

Elementary Case Example of One School's Approach

Kiker Elementary

Principal - Lori Schneider

- Ownership - Every grade level teacher is responsible for every student at their grade level.
- Campus culture - Students are General ed. first, and Special ed. on top of that. The campus culture is that every student belongs.
- Student peer relations - Campus culture supports student peer relationships. Older students are paired with younger students (grades 3 and Kindergarten, 4 and 1, 5 and 2), including lunch, recess, and tutoring time after school.
- Student's own toolkit - Before end of year assessments occur, each Sped student has a toolkit, developed during the year by the student and the teacher, that contains supplemental aids, "fidget" items, accommodations appropriate to the student, manipulatives for math, etc. In this way, the students are prepared with their toolkit for TAKS.
- Accommodations manual - Every teacher (General ed. and Special ed.) is expected to read, know, and apply details from the accommodations manual. Applications of accommodations are discussed in depth at staff meetings.
- Purposeful planning – Teachers use key planning documents for every class of students.
- Creative staffing - Staffing does not drive student test settings on test day. The appropriate test setting is provided to each student, small group of students, etc.
